PRESIDENT'S GERMAN COLONY PLAN AND POLISH QUESTION BEFORE THE PEACE COUNCIL

British War Cabinet Holds Conference on Disposal of Colonial Possessions.

SECOND TRIP FOR WILSON

American Executive Said to Have Become Convinced that Return to France in the Spring Will be Necessary; Polish Mission Now Ready.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—Great Britain's war cabinet held a special meeting yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock to discuss the difficulty arising between President Wilson's plans for the disposal of German colonies and that of the other conferees, according to the Paris edition of the London Dail Mail, which adds:

"It is believed that some approach was made toward Mr. Wilson's viewpoint at the meeting of the supreme council after Mr. Wilson's important speech, giving more details of his plan. Premier Lloyd George, Foreign Minister Balfour and Premier Clemenceau followed Mr. Wilson in speaking on the subject."

PARIS, Tuesday, Jan. 28.—The future of the colonies taken from Germany has assumed a place as one of the most interesting of the immediate bases of the many-side problems under consideration by the supreme council of the peace conference. Hearings now are being given by the supreme council to members of the conference and to colonial disposition of the colonies. The council is at the same time proceeding with the consideration of a general policy which shall be adopted by the five great powers in this matter.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—The supreme council of the peace conference had before it for consideration, on assembling this morning, the Polish question and the instructions to be given the Allied mission to Poland, recently authorized and about to leave. The program calls for the appearance of Polish and Czecho-Slovak representatives before the council to present their views.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—Much as President Wilson still hopes to avoid a second trip to Europe it begins to look as if the trend of peace conference affairs would cause him to feel impelled to re-cross the Atlantic in the early spring.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—In connection with the territorial questions before it the peace conference is confronted by no less than three secret treaties, says the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail today.

SCOTTISH STRIKE GROWS

Miners Quit in Sympathy With Fellows in Other Lines of Work.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Miners in many of the collieries in west Scotland have struck in sympathy with the men who threw down their tools at Clyde. This action was taken in spite of their leaders' protests.

A strike conference was held at Glasgow on Tuesday and was attended by delegates from all parts of Scotland. It was decided to support the strike committee and submit to the government proposals for a settlement on a basis of a 40-hour week. It also was decided that the strike would in no case approach the government or its employers. It was announced at the meeting that the strikers in the Clyde district are estimated to number 70,000.

RIOTING IN BELFAST

By Associated Press.

BELFAST, Jan. 29.—There was much rioting in the dark streets here last night. Many plate glass windows in stores along prominent streets were smashed and some of their contents stolen.

There was considerable wanton stone throwing during the night. Many windows being broken.

DEMAND INDEMNITY

Until They Get It Norwegian Sailors Will Not Take Food to Germany.

By Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 29.—The Norwegian sailors' organization has passed a resolution declining to assist in carrying food to Germany until the German government has paid an indemnity of $4,000,000 for members of the organization who were victims of submarines.

Escaped Prisoners Recaptured.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Jan. 29.—Harold Honold, one of the four prisoners who escaped from the Venango county jail Sunday night after beating Sheriff James Harrah insensible, was captured at his home in Callensburg this forenoon. CHILDREN DO FINELY IN BIBLE DRILL AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Besides 40 Young Folks Present Program of Songs and Other Features for Big Audiance.

Revival services at the Christian church continue with increasing interest. Every service has it's special feature, but last night marked high tide. The house was completely filled, the children taking part in the Bible drill, occupying the platform. There were 45 of them, and the way they answered the 100 questions on the Bible was certainly an eye opener. Mrs. Boyer had been training them after school for only eight evenings, and has proven herself a wonder with the children's work. Many expressed themselves as believing it the best thing of it's nature ever attempted in Connellsville, and several have sought to have it repeated. The music last night was also along special lines. Mr. and Mrs. Boyer received great applause in appreciation of their xylophone duet. Mr. Boyer's solo was "The Prodigal Son," and was exactly in line with the sermon.

Rev. G. W. Buckner discoursed for some time on the subject, "The Prodigal Son," bringing simple, plain Gospel message. All rejoiced in hearing the "good confession" made when a young man stepped out. Services continue through the week. Tonight's sermon subject is "The Enchantment of Sin." There will be special music also. A union prayer service for all the sections at the church is announced for Thursday afternoon at 2:30, Mrs. Buckner will lead

PRIVATE BAILEY HOME

Vanderbilt Member of 320th Infantry Put Out of Action By Gas.

Private William O. Bailey, member of Headquarters Company of the 320th Infantry, who was gassed in France in November, returned last evening to his home at Vanderbilt. Following his discharge from the hospital Private Bailey made application for return to his company, but was ordered home. After a furlough of 10 days he will return to Lakewood, N. J., to be discharged. Private Bailey has a brother, Private Daniel W. Bailey in the same regiment. They are brothers of Mrs. C. O. Bane of Connellsville.

PROCLAIMS RATIFICATION

Final Legal Step Paves Way for Prohibition in Country.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Ratification of the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution was proclaimed formally today by Frank L. Polk, acting secretary of state.

The proclamation is dated today but legal authority of the department say ratification was accomplished when the 36th state acted favorably on January 16 and that under the terms of the amendment itself, prohibition becomes effective one year from that date.

WANT U. S. CHASERS

Greeks Seek to Thus Augment Already Americanized Navy.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—Greek naval authorities have been examining American submarine chasers which have been in the Adriatic sea with a view to their purchase.

The Greek navy already has two former American battleships and experts in the service favor a further augmentation of the fleet with American craft.

SHALLENBERGER KILLED LEADING MEN IN BATTLE

Vanderbilt Lieutenant Three Times Hit as Command Presses Forward.

VOLUNTEER AT THE TIME

Is Assigned to Duties as Gas Officer But When Company is Ordered to Attack he Pleads to be Allowed to Accompany It; Shell Ends Career.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Shallenberger of Vanderbilt have received a letter from Captain Martin of Company G, 56th Infantry, concerning the death of their son, Lieutenant H. D. Shallenberger of the same company. After telling of personal matters and how closely he and Lieutenant Shallenberger had been connected for the last year, Captain Martin adds:

"On the morning of November 1 the second battalion was ordered to attack. Hugh had been detailed as battalion gas officer, the gas officer having been wounded. When H. D. learned of the attack he asked the major to allow him to return to his company and take part in the attack. He led the Third platoon of Company G and when his platoon ran into heavy machine gun fire, at the first burst of fire several of his men were killed and Lieutenant Shallenberger was wounded in the calf of the leg. One of his men told him he was wounded but he kept on going. He continued the advance until he was hit by another bullet and wounded so severely as to disable him. Shortly afterward a German shell explosion killed him.

"I know what a sorrow it must be to you but you can rest assured Lieutenant Shallenberger, while still advancing and leading his men, died as gallantly as a soldier could. Lieutenant Shallenberger had all the courage one man should have, and he was brave to the last.

"I shall always remember him as one of the best—a man who lived cheerfully and died gallantly. He lies buried with six of his men in a small quarry by the side of the Preny-Pagny road, about two and one half kilometers west of Preny. I have visited the spot twice and the grave is easily located. I wish to express my sympathy to the family."

First Lieutenant Butler pays tribute in the following:

"Lieutenant Shallenberger was as fine a fellow as I ever knew, a man whom every one with whom he came in contact recognized as a man of the highest type of morals; a fellow who would always lend a helping hand and one we all miss. He certainly gave a good account of himself, inflicting casualties upon the enemy before he was taken."

PREFER TO WALK

Dunbar Workmen Join In Protest Against Trolley Fare Increase.

DUNBAR, Jan. 29.—To see more than a score of Dunbarians, laborers in various lines at the several plants at Mount Braddock, disembark from the trolley cars at Pechin and walk the half mile home from that terminal zone point, was what was witnessed last evening when the men came home from their work. They preferred to walk to contributing an extra nickel to a corporation which they considered was treating them unjustly. Ever since the West Penn lines had been in operation they had enjoyed the ride for a single fare. Now two fares are exacted, and they naturally resent the 100 per cent raise.

The laboring men here have been a great source of revenue to the West Penn, but so long as the present spirit prevails these men will ride only when they have to, and ecourage everybody else to follow their example.

200,000 YANKEES WILL REMAIN IN FRANCE, ESTIMATE.

By Associated Press

PARIS, Jan. 29.—At least 200,000 Americans now in the army will remain in France, according to a statement made by a prominent member of the American colony in Paris and quoted by the "Intransigeant." The majority will remain, it is said, because they wish to marry French women and the rest because they are charmed with French life and see great opportunities here for American energy.

INDIANA LOSES

In Fight to Prevent Increase in Telephone Rates Becoming Effective.

By Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 29.—Holding that the United States District court had no jurisdiction in the application of the Indiana Public Service Commission for a permanent injunction to prevent collection by the telephone companies of new toll rates recently ordered into effect by Postmaster General Burleson, Judge A. B. Anderson today dissolved the temporary restraining order granted several days ago.

The rates become effective in Indiana immediately upon the court's ruling.

ALLEGED THIEF CAUGHT

Informations have been lodged before Alderman W. D. Colborn against George Ranker and Clarence Sanner charging the theft from West Apple street Saturday night of an automobile belonging to Paul Buttermore. Ranker has been arrested and officers are looking for Sanner, who is under bond to appear at the March term of court on a similar charge.

It is said the two drove the car to Breackneck and removed from it a wheel and other parts to replace parts in another car owned by Sanner.

By Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 29.—Members of the old Pittsburg Federal League club will salvage among them $39,645.36 out of their claims remaining unpaid on high salaried contracts which went by the board when the league became defunct.

This was revealed today when the auditors' report was filed in Common Pleas court in the receivership of the Exposition Park association, which operated the baseball club.

MADE AT DUNBAR

Teachers' Flag Work of Miss Ada Carroll and Mrs. Alma Rodkey.

The beautiful service flag dedicated at the big teachers' meeting at Uniontown last Saturday was the work of Miss Ada Carroll, primary teacher in the Dunbar schools, and Mrs. Alma Rodkey, substitute teacher.

The design was one of the most artistic and pleasing yet seen in the county. The five golden stars that illumined the center, added conspicuous luster to the flag. Miss Carroll is a daughter of County Superintendent J. S. Carroll.

PNEUMONIA TAKES OFF 110 PERSONS IN CITY IN 1918

All But 12 Fall Victims During Months of October and November.

INFLUENZA IS INCLUDED

Total From All Causes During Year 267, Report of Registrar Shows; Influenza and Pneumonia Not Separated; Births For Year Number 336.

Of 267 deaths reported in Connellsville during the year 1918, not including non-residents who died at the Cottage State hospital, 110 were due to influenza-pneumonia, the death on the official reports being chargeable to the latter disease, and of this abnormally large mortality from pneumonia and the attending trouble, influenza, 98 cases occurred during the months of October and November when the plague was at its height.

The above figures are gleaned from the annual report of Alex. B. Hood, registrar of vital statistics, made public today. According to the registrar's report only 12 deaths from pneumonia were reported during the other 10 months of the year. All counted there were 114 deaths during October and November, October leading with 80. During the remainder of the year the highest number reported in any one month was 21, that being in December.

Deaths from pneumonia in the year 1917 numbered 30, while the total was 183, or 84 less than in 1918. As in the year 1918, November led in 1917 as the month of the greatest mortality.

During 1918 deaths from the usually serious diseases were comparatively light. Tuberculosis claimed 11 victims, four less than in the previous year. Five were due to cancer, as compared with eight the year before. Arterio sclerosis or hardening of the arteries claimed 17, one more, and apoplexy 11, three more, than the previous year. These were the only diseases running into two figures, with the exception of stillborn babes, which numbered 21.

Twenty persons fell victims of accidents, two dying from fracture of the skull, four from burns, eight from internal injuries, two from drowning, and two from electrocution. Causes other than those above named were:

Angina pectoris 2; asthma 1; alcoholism 1; arterio insufficiency 1; aenemia 1; cardiac dilatation 4; cerebro spinal meningitis 2; cirrhosis of liver 1; diphtheria 3; eczema 1, endocarditis 4; encephalitis 1, dilatation stomach, acute, 1; gangrene 3; heart disease 4; hemorrhage from cord 1; indigestion, acute, 1; inanition 3; grip 1; malformation of liver 1; myocarditis 2, meningitis, acute, 1; myelitis 1; nephritis 4; oedema of lungs 2, obstruction of bowels 1; pulmonary embolism 4; puerperal fever 1; peritonitis 2; paralysis 1; premature birth 8; rickets 1; rheumatic fever 1; suicide 1; senility 1; sore throat 1; uraemia 2; toxic gastro entero colitis 5.

Classified as to age the greatest number of deaths was found to

REDEEMING TICKETS

West Penn Officials Deny Assertion That Redemption Is Refused.

After a complaint had been received by Mayor Duggan yesterday that the West Penn Railways company would not redeem the unused strip tickets in passengers' hands until February 15, the company this morning announced that the tickets were being redeemed at any division offices for face value. It was announced that $200 in unused tickets were redeemed here yesterday.

The complainant told Mayor Duggan that he offered the conductor on a car three six-cent tickets and two pennies. This being refused he said the conductor accepted the six-cent tickets as five cent fares. The mayor said this morning that the man was given to understand that the tickets would not be redeemed until February 15.

At the West Penn offices this morning it was stated that if passengers wished to give the six cent tickets for a five cent fare the conductors would accept them but otherwise they would have to be validated at the division offices.

FINE WEATHER ENDS

Quick Change in Temperature and Snow Comes During Night.

After two weeks of warm balmy weather, snow fell last night and continued this morning. For a time a real blizzard was promised. Later it cleared somewhat and the snowfall lessened.

The change in the weather was quick. Yesterday the sun chased the mercury up, but after midnight it became colder and there was a slight fall. The temperature dropped to 26 degrees. The weather at this time last year was practically the same, the maximum reached by the mercury being 46 and the coldest 23.

EVANGELIST MAKES DEEP IMPRESSION AT UNION SERVICE

Sermons so Different, One of Attendants at Methodist Protestant Church Is Quoted as Saying.

Interest continues to grow at the union evangelistic services at the Methodist Protestant church. Several families from out of town were present last night. An audience which filled the main auditorium and a part of the Sunday school room was present. The sermon of the evening was preached by Rev. R. E. Cairns, his subject being "More Than Conquerors." Rev. Cairns wove a great deal of his own experience into his sermon. One of the converts said: "Rev. Cairns preaches so differently now from what he used to, that it makes me feel that there must be something in what he is preaching and if God can do that for him I want Him to do the same for me."

Eight or 10 persons were converted at the altar. Mrs. Santmyer sang a selection before the sermon.

There was a service at the United Brethren church again this afternoon at 2 o'clock. There will be no open air meeting this evening, but a prayer meeting will take its place at 7 o'clock at the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Goosman, who rendered such splendid service over Sunday, will return for next Sunday's services. Mrs. Goosman will repeat the story of her convers on at the Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

RIGHTS CONTESTED

Blood Relationship Figures in Litigation Over Uniontown Estate.

Legal right of William McClelland Sauber, of Washington, D. C., to participate as principal beneficiary in the estate of the late Margaret J. McClelland, Uniontown is contested in a bill in equity filed yesterday afternoon in Uniontown by M. Margaret Brownfield and Edward W. Brownfield, of St. Louis, Mo. The contest is based upon the blood relationship of the contestants to Mrs. McClelland. Approximately $400,000 is involved, consisting of one property in Uniontown and coal holdings in Greene county.

Sauber, who is a clerk in the treasury department at Washington, is a son of Laura McClelland Sauber, the principal beneficiary of the estate by the terms of the will, but was not a blood relation of deceased according to statements set forth in the bill.

FOURTEEN-MILL TAX

Court Permits Four-Mill Increase in Connellsville Township.

Petition of the road supervisors of Connellsville township for permission to increase the tax levy for road purposes four mills making a total levy of 14 mills, was granted by the court in Uniontown yesterday.

The supervisors, Philip Stinger, Lloyd Stillwagon and A. J. Stillwagon, set forth in their petition that it would be impossible properly to maintain the recently improved roads and bridges in the township with 10 mills tax at the present scale of prices for labor and materials.

CONNELLSVILLE WINS OVER SHAYSIDE IN A SLOW GAME, 31-8

Locals Break Losing Streak and Swamp Opponents; Next Game at Sewickley, Friday.

The Connellsville high school "broke over" last night at Shadyside and defeated that team 31-8. The locals continually had the lead and Shadyside did not get going until the last quarter when Connellsville's lead was too great to overcome.

Shadyside made only two field goals in the entire game, the other four points being scored on foul goals. Lyon did excellent foul shooting last night tossing in 15 out of 18 chances. There were 15 foul goals scored by Connellsville and eight field goals. Struble got into the game last night and scored three baskets. Jimmie McConnell was in the lineup in place of Danner, who tore a toenail while undressing after the game with Norwin here Saturday.

The lineup:

Connellsville—31.		Shadyside—8
Lyon	F	Garland
Buttermore	F	Rae
Jim McConnell	C	Geary
Moore	G	Baum
Joe McConnell	G	Albertson

Substitutions—Brandt for Albertson; Rosemblum for Baum; Fisher for Geary; Struble for Buttermore; Durnell for Lyon; Menefee for Joe McConnell; Walker for Rae; Frauenheim for Brandt. Field goals—Jim McConnell 4, Struble 3, Rae 2, Buttermore. Foul goals—Lyon 15 out of 18, Garland 2 out of 6, Rosemblum 2 out of 4.

In preparation for the March term of criminal court in Uniontown, the jury commissioners yesterday drew the names of 524 veniremen who will be summoned for duty during the term which commences the first week in March. Five hundred petit jurors and 24 grand jurors were drawn. One hundred petit jurors will report for jury duty each week during the term.

The December and March terms of criminal court will be consolidated into a five weeks' session. No sessions were held during the December term because of the War Chest Campaign which was conducted at that time.

The grand jurors are:

S. T. Benford, Connellsville; Jacob Laughrey, Fairchance; N. Moats, Washington township; Jno. R. Grimm, Springfield township; Charles Chambers, Uniontown; Charles Cosseli, Connellsville township; James Metz, Perry township; Wilbert Grant, Washington township; Samuel A. Bolen, Smithfield; Luke Osborne, Washington township; Harry Bennington, South Union; James Shaffer, Dawson; Louie Tate, Georges township; C. L. Miller, Henry Clay township; Martin Slaughter, Upper Tyrone; Clark Rowan, Springfield township; Joseph McGee, Dunbar township; R. K. Wright, German township; Russell Silbaugh, Henry Clay; Harry T. Crossland, Connellsville; Pearl Willis, South Brownsville; P. J. Connell, Dunbar; Geo. W. Kennison, German township; Henry Moats, Georges township.

Recovers From Hiccoughs.

Cyrus Shaw of Ohiopyle recovered yesterday from the hiccoughs after suffering from them for one week. He became afflicted with the cough on January 20 and it was one week before the treatment of the attending physician took effect. Mr. Shaw is very weak after his experience.

Admitted to Hospital.

German Banks Open.

The Grim Reaper

MRS. JOHN R. BRENNEN.

SCOTTDALE, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Agnes Shannon Brennen, wife of John P. Brennen, coal and coke operator, died this morning at 4 o'clock at her home in Broadway from influenza, with which she was stricken 10 days ago. Not until Sunday did the condition of Mrs. Brennen become alarming. Dr. J. H. Johnson of Cumberland, Md., a specialist in influenza, was called Sunday afternoon in consultation with Dr. Vincent Pisula, the attending physician. Dr. Johnson remained until Monday. Yesterday it became apparent that the end was near. In the death of Mrs. Brennen the community loses one of its most lovable women. While she did not herald her good works publicly Mrs. Brennen was known to many a needy one for acts of charity. Even during her last illness she continued to dispense cheer to the poor. Though having no children of her own, Mrs. Brennen was the best of mothers to the children of her husband by a former marriage. She was an accomplished musician. Mrs. Brennen was born at Meyersdale, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shannon. Besides her husband and her mother who resides at Meyersdale, she leaves two brothers, Edward and James Shannon of Meyersdale. She was a member of St. John's Roman Catholic church, Scottdale. Requiem mass will be celebrated there Friday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in St. John's cemetery.

J. B. FRANK SMITH.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 29.—J. B. Frank Smith, a former resident of Mount Pleasant, who for about a year has been connected with the internal revenue office in Pittsburg and has been a resident of Dormont, died at his home there last night of influenza, according to a message received here today. Mr. Smith was formerly assessor and register in the First ward. At one time he was store manager for the Union Supply company at Alice. His wife, two daughters, Gertrude, at home, and Mrs. Nannie Schaub, in Ohio, a son, Edward, at home, and a brother, Homer, near Ruffsdale, survive. It is expected the body will be brought here for burial.

JOHN B. FROST DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME IN UNIONTOWN

Was Formerly Trainmaster on the Connellsville Division of B. & O.; Later With Steel Company.

John B. Frost, superintendent of transportation for the Oliver & Snyder Steel company and formerly a resident of Connellsville, at which time he was trainmaster on the Connellsville division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, died suddenly last midnight of heart disease at his home at 191 Gallatin avenue, Uniontown. Mr. Frost, who had been attending to the duties of his office regularly and was apparently in good health, was taken ill about 20 minutes before midnight and in less than a half hour was dead.

Starting as a telegraph operator on the New York Central railroad in early youth, Mr. Frost spent much of his life in railroad work. For 25 years he was with the Baltimore & Ohio, first as chief clerk at Camden Station, Baltimore, then trainmaster at Wilmington, Del., and finally for four years in the same capacity in Connellsville. Eighteen years ago he left the services of the railroad to become transportation head of the Oliver & Snyder Steel company, which position he had held since. Four years ago the family removed from this city to Uniontown.

Mr. Frost was born at Westchester, N. Y., February 17, 1852, and would have been 67 his next anniversary. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Frost, both dead. He married Miss Anna C. Mansfield of Baltimore. The widow, a son, John B. Frost of Uniontown, and a daughter, Miss Margaret, at home; a brother, William, in New Jersey, and a sister, Mrs. Ella Mapes of Westchester, survive. Mr. Frost was a member of Trinity Episcopal church, Connellsville, and of the Baltimore & Ohio relief.

The funeral will be from the home of his son, John B. Frost, 262 North Gallatin avenue. The time has not been arranged.

JOKE ON TY COBB

Lots of professional baseball players pride themselves on their gift of repartee, but out on the road even the smartest of them are beaten at that sort of game.

Ty Cobb, king of players in the business, smart as he is, was tripped up by an ordinary waiter.

In a small New York hotel one day Ty loudly called the attention of a waiter to a fly in his soup.

"Very true, my dear Mr. Cobb," said the waiter, "but why should you worry when there is not a chance in the world of your catching it?"

FINAL CHAPTER

In Thompson-Connellsville Controversy to Come February 19.

The final chapter in the controversy hinging around the control of the Thompson-Connellsville Coke company will be written Wednesday, February 19, when the stockholders will meet in open court for the purpose of electing directors. An order to that effect was entered yesterday by Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen, who will preside at the stockholders' meeting.

The case has been before the court for six months, the issue for the control of the company being between John P. Brennen, president of the company, and J. H. Hillman, Jr., coke operator of Pittsburg. In handing down the order for the stockholders' meeting, Judge Van Swearingen overruled exceptions filed January 10 to the court's answer of December 31, 1918, to defendant's request for finding of fact.

Schedules Completed.

The schedule of the Connellsville high school basketball team was completed this morning when a game was arranged with the Morgantown high team here on Saturday, March 22. The schedule for the girl team was also completed when a game was arranged with the Jeannette girls to be played here on Saturday, March 29.

Abilene, Texas.—"For almost a year I was unfit to do my work as I suffered so from female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health after physicians had failed."—Mrs. E. E. OWENS.

Rockville, Conn.—"I suffered so long from female ills I was blue and melancholy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health after everything else had failed."—MARY WIRZ, 3 Chamberlain St.

Oakland, Cal.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me such relief during Change of Life, I wish every woman could know about it. I surely praise this great remedy for women's ills."—Mrs. MARY S. ASHLEY, 5709 Dover Street.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act directly on the female organism.

PUBLIC IS WARNED Against Taking Substitutes for Nuxated Iron

Physicians Below Say That Ordinary Metallic Iron Preparations Cannot Possibly Give The Same STRENGTH, POWER AND ENDURANCE As Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron

United States Judge Atkinson Gives Opinion

Careful investigation by physicians among druggists and patients has revealed the fact that there are thousands of people taking iron who do not distinguish between organic iron and metallic iron, and that such persons often fail to obtain the vital energy, strength and endurance which they seek, simply because they have taken the wrong form of iron.

Judge G. W. Atkinson

Therefore, physicians mentioned below, advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood builder to go to their family doctors and obtain a prescription calling for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and present this to their druggist so that there may be no question about obtaining the proper article. But if they do not wish to go to the trouble of getting a prescription for Nuxated Iron then be sure to look on the label and see that the words NUXATED IRON are printed thereon—not Nux and Iron nor any other form of iron, but Nuxated Iron.

United States Judge G. W. Atkinson, of the Court of Claims, Washington, D.C., says: "It is without hesitation that I recommend Nuxated Iron to persons who in the stress of physical or mental labors have permitted the system to become debilitated, the body exhausted or the nerves run down. It has restored my appetite and my vitality. I feel that I have dropped off the burden of months of toil in the few weeks that I have been following the very simple directions for the use of Nuxated Iron."

The remarkable results produced by Nuxated Iron and its widespread sale (it being estimated that over three million people annually are to-day using it), has led to the offering of numerous substitutes, and these physicians say that health officials and doctors everywhere should caution the public against accepting substitutes in medicines and they especially warn against accepting substitutes for Nuxated Iron, which, instead of being organic iron may be nothing more than a metallic iron compound which may in some cases produce more harm than good. The widespread publication of the above information, has been suggested by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital; Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author and others, so that the public may be informed on this subject and protected from the use of metallic iron under the delusion that it is Nuxated Iron or at least something as good as Nuxated Iron.

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by A. A. Clarke and other druggists.

DAILY HEALTH TALKS

Good Health Is in Your Own Hands

BY SAMUEL HAMILTON, M. D.

The man who said "People dig their graves with their teeth" uttered a truth that goes clear to the bottom of the health question. Suppose you should take everything you eat and drink for breakfast, everything you eat and drink for dinner, everything you eat and drink for supper, and mix all together in one mass. It would surely be a dreadful mixture to look upon. And yet your stomach is obliged to dispose of that unsightly mass each day! Is it any wonder so many people have indigestion, dyspepsia, backache, headache, bad blood, liver complaint, skin diseases, nervousness, coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and goodness knows what else? Yes, people dig their graves with their teeth, and before the end comes they pass through one sickness or trouble after another. You should be glad to know that Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, has placed in the drug stores a medicine called Golden Medical Discovery that can be depended upon to overcome many of the diseases named above. It may seem impossible for one medicine to do so much, but really the whole thing is as simple as the figure 1. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery corrects the disordered conditions in a sick stomach, aids digestion, acts as a tonic and purifies the blood. When this is done, away go the diseases that are caused by a sick stomach. If you are digging your grave with your teeth, stop today. Correct your stomach disorders right now with Golden Medical Discovery, and henceforth eat for your health's sake. If you don't know what foods are best for you, write Dr. Pierce, Pres. Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive confidential medical advice without charge.

Golden Medical Discovery is made without alcohol or opiates, so anybody and everybody can take it with safety. It is put up both in liquid and tablet form. Send Dr. Pierce 10c for a trial pkg., and see for yourself how good it is. Try it now.

WILL THEY REFUSE TO WEAKEN

That the street car traveling public is not convinced that there exists real necessity for so large an increase in rates as even the revised schedule of the West Penn Railways company provides, and that this schedule discriminates in favor of the short distance traveler, are the chief reasons why there is a decided inclination to allow the protest already filed with the Public Service Commission to stand.

Patrons had become accustomed to, even if never fully satisfied with, the six-cent fare. Inasmuch as the increase applied alike to all zones it was considered fair in that respect, but the new schedule is not so regarded. The objection to it comes from having added to the number of zones so that the fare between points like Connellsville and Dunbar, Connellsville and Leisenring, Connellsville and Dickerson Run, and others, has been increased while the fare in single zones has been decreased. To the average traveler this is an unjustifiable and unfair discrimination, hence the persistence and earnestness of the objections.

It remains to be seen, however, whether the indignation of street car patrons will remain at such heat that the case before the Public Service Commission will be carried through to a final conclusion. It has often happened, in similar instances, that the enthusiasm of protesting patrons of public utilities has waned after the first outbursts and the cause thereof soon forgotten.

Is the history of such movements to be repeated, or will the rate objectors refuse to weaken?

THE COST OF GOVERNMENT OPERATION.

During ten months under government operation the revenues of the railroads increased $735,000,000, due to the 50 per cent increase in passenger and the 25 per cent increase in freight rates, but the net revenues during the same period were $215,000,000 less than were received for a similar period under private operation. By the simple process of addition of these two sums it is shown that government operation of the railroads has cost the people of this country $950,000,000 more than it cost for a like period under private operation.

From January to the end of October, 1918, freight traffic increased only 1.9 per cent over the same months of 1917, while operating expenses increased by 38 per cent. In the month of October alone freight traffic increased three and one-half per cent. But operating expenses were 47 per cent greater than in October 1917. This is in spite of the fact that October 1917 was the period when congestion of the railroads approaching the Atlantic ports was the greatest and the operation of the roads were carried on only with the greatest difficulty.

Yet Congress is asked to extend the tenure of government operation or control for five more years of experimentation, costly ineffiency and cumulative irritation and inconvenience to the American people.

Beating the trolley company is the popular outdoor sport these days.

Fayette county men are pulling off good jobs and honors at Harrisburg with the same facility that they do almost everywhere they are found.

The Bolsheviki are out-Hunning the Hun in their diabolical crimes in Russia, something the world had regarded as almost impossible.

The old rule about small children being seen but not heard is being given a new application by the small nations at the peace conference.

It seems that Pennsylvania is destined to be merely a trailer behind the New York water wagon.

Won't the weatherman be tempted to make up for lost time on his winter schedule?

The administration has asked for only $1,250,000 to enable the government to carry out its guarantee to the farmers of $2.20 a bushel for the wheat crop which has not yet been grown. This merely reminds us that Washington still persists in the belief that money is grown like wheat or other crops

No Monopoly of Virtues for Bryan.

Raleigh, N. C., Times.

Mr. Bryan is neither a signpost pointing to progress nor a bell wether to lead the flock into a pollt cal haven. If he knew the remedy for every human ailment for which he prescribes, he would still be unsafe. He uses too many mere suspicions as statements of fact. Not all his unctuous self-righteousness can excuse his expressed lack of faith in men who have risen above the level of sodden mediocrity by stepping-stones other than political preferment at the hands of the "people."

It is time that somebody brought an indictment against him under the Sherman Act for having monopolized all human virtues.

WEST PENN ONE OF GROUP UNDER SINGLE CONTROL

Works & Electric company.

The West Penn Traction & Water Power company, which controls the West Penn Railways company through common stock ownership, is thus described:

"Incorporated, West Virginia, July 1911, as Black Water River Water Power Co., and changed to present name April 20, 1912. Main office 221 Fourth avenue, Pittsburg. Registrar, Colonial Trust Co. Transfer agents, W. F. Craig, 221 Fourth avenue, Pittsburg, for common and preferred, and Louisville Trust Co., Louisville, Ky., for common only. Annual meeting third Thursday in February."

The authorized and outstanding stock of the company, shares of the par value of $100, is as follows:

	Authorized	Outst'd'g
Common	$22,500,000	$22,054,700
Preferred, 6% cumulative	8,500,00	8,054,700
Totals	$31,000,000	$30,109,400

"Preferred is 6% accumulative (16½% in arrears) and preferred as to assets; preferred dividends were paid regularly each quarter until June, 1914, when dividend was passed; quarterly payments of 1½% were resumed March, 1917. Paid regularly since.

"Present formation of the company was made in accordance with a proposition by the American Water Works & Guarantee Co., (now American Water Works & Electric Co.) to stockholders of the West Penn Traction Co., (now West Penn Railways Co.,) whereby the West Penn Traction & Water Power Co. agreed to deliver to the American Water Works & Guarantee Co. its common and preferred stock in exchange for the entire common stock of the West Penn Traction Co., and $500,000 of the $2,000,000 capital stock of the Hydro-Electric Co. of West Virginia (formerly Cheat River Hydro-Electric Co.) Stockholders of the West Penn Traction Co. received one share each of common and prefepred stock of the West Penn Traction & Water Power Co., in exchange for each share of the common stock of the West Penn Traction Co., exchanged. On May 25,1917, the West Penn Traction company was merged with the West Penn Railways Co. Company owns all of the common stock of the West Penn Railways Co. Company has no funded debt."

From 1912 to 1917, both years inclusive, 3,230 shares of preferred stock were sold on the Pittsburg stock exchange, the highest price being 80 and the lowest 28. In August, 1918, 46 shares of the same stock were sold at a range of 55½, high, to 54¼, low. In November last 100 shares were sold at 65.

To January, 1918, 16,759 shares of common stock were sold at a range of 38, high, to 10, low. During seven months of 1918 there were sales in lots of 10 to 650 shares at a range of 15½, high, in November, to 9, low, in February. The last sale of the year, 10 shares in December, was at 14½.

The American Water Works & Electric company, which in turn controls the West Penn Traction & Water Power company, is a Virginia corporation, receiving its charter from that state April 27, 1914. It succeeded to the property and franchises of the American Water Works & Guarantee company, which owned and operated a series of water works throughout the country, the plant of the Connellsville Water company being among the number. The capitalization is as follows, shares of stock having a par value of $100:

	Authorized	Outst'd'g
Common stock	$10,000,000	$ 9,200,000
First prfd., 7% cumulative	10,000,000	5,450 000
Participating preferred	10,000,000	10,000,000
Totals	$30,000,000	$24,650,000

The bonded indebtedness of the company is shown in the following:

	Authorized	Outst'd'g
Collateral Trust, 20-year	$20,000,000	$16,870 400
Bonds of subsidiary W't'r Co's in hands public		24,498,500
Totals		$41,368,900

"The first preferred stock is redeemable at 110—is 7% cumulative—is preferred as to assets. After the 7% on the first preferred has been paid, and earnings warrant paying 6% on both the participating preferred and common, any excess dividends shall be shared equally by the participating preferred and common.

"No dividends were paid on the first preferred from organization until August, 1917, when a regular quarterly dividend of 1¾% was paid, arrangements having been completed for the liquidation of arrears dividends, amounting to 21%."

The earnings and assets of the company in 1917 and 1918, ended June 30 in each year, are shown in the following:

	1918	1917
Gross earnings	$ 1,480 379	$ 1,538,016
Net earnings	1,338,258	1,462,582
Balance after interest, etc.	585,135	648,235
Total assets	57,205,255	56,189,301

Stocks of this company are not listed on the Pittsburg stock exchange. The latest market reports are: common, 6½ bid, 7½ asked; participating preferred, 13 bid, 16 asked; first preferred, 69 bid, 72 asked.

HIGH CLASS GROCERIES

If you are not a customer of our grocery departments, you miss lots of good things and are losing money. Now consider, we have sixty-three of the largest, most prosperous grocery stores in Fayette and Westmoreland Counties; we are daily receiving for the customers of these stores carloads of the highest class groceries in the market, coming from points as far away as California, the Pacific Coast, coming from all through Western and Eastern points. The goods are distributed to our numerous stores according to the needs of the business. We have had this fall and winter in transit over two hundred carloads of goods at one time, consisting of all sorts of groceries, including canned goods from Maryland points, from Western points, and the Pacific coast, flour, potatoes, feed, hay, cabbage, and other goods sold by grocers. Now this is almost a continuous performance. Our carload shipmenst come to Everson, our distributing point, sometimes they are so numerous it congests the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. We merely mention these facts to impress you with our big business and the advantage we have in buying. The object in giving you that further is to impress on you the fact that our customers get the advantage of our close cash buying. Our prices are lower, our goods are high class, in many instances superior, to what competitors are offering you. If you are not a customer, look us up.

IF YOU NEED A MEDICINE YOU SHOULD HAVE THE BEST

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain- the article did not fulfil the promises of the manufacturer This applies more particularly to a medicine A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it

A prominent druggist says Take for example Dr Kilmer's Swamp Root a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend for in almost every case it shows excellent results Many of my customers testify to other kidney remedy has so large a sale

According to sworn statements and verified testimonials of thousands who have used the preparation the success of Dr Kilmer's Swamp Root is due to the fact so many people claim that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney liver and bladder ailments corrects urinary troubles neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel's Post Address Dr Kilmer & Co Binghamton N Y and enclose ten cents also mention the Connellsville Daily Courier Large and medium size bottle for sale at all drug stores—Adv

YANKEE TRUCKS GO WHERE TOURING CARS NEVER COULD TRAVEL

Bravery of Ammunition Train Drivers and Crews Related in Letter from Star Junction Soldier.

In a letter to his parents Mr and Mrs C Aspinwall of Star Junction Sergeant Daniel B Aspinwall Company C, 307th Supply Train has the following to tell of life over there during the closing days of the war

"Dear Father and Mother

'Just a few lines to let you know I am still in the land of the living and enjoying the best of health I don't think we will have to stay in France long, as things are looking real good and we are getting closer to Brest every day

"I guess you had a fine time on Christmas We did I was out with the lieutenant We were in charge of 40 trucks taking boys to the parade for President Wilson We got back Christmas evening at 6 30 and then we had our big feed which consisted of roast goose mashed potatoes peas pumpkin pie, cake celery bread coffee cocoa wine cigars and cigarets After dinner a little French girl took me in to see her Christmas tree She also had the infant manger stable and cows It surely did look fine

O yes mother I received Holy Communion last Sunday We also have a chaplain Father Welsh Here is a little of our experiences

On October 13 we moved to Apremont, France which town had only 10 days previously been in possession of the Germans the battlefields up to that time having not been entirely cleared of the dead Upon our arrival there it was found to be a very desolate place it being almost impossible to find a suitable place in which to locate our office as practically all the buildings and houses had been either shot away entirely or left with not more than two walls standing Small pup tents were our sleeping quarters Our trucks were constantly hauling rations and supplies to the front line trenches To do this trucks had to pass through such towns as Fleville, St. Juvin and Grandpre These towns and the road leading to and through them were constantly under shell fire from enemy guns and under observance of German observation balloons In stances have occurred where our trucks have gone to destinations which had previously been thought to be impossible even by touring cars

No place seemed to be too far or dangerous for our drivers as they all realized that he cargoes had to be at the front. It has been stated on good authority that we hauled 80 percent of the ammunition which included shells for the French 75s and for the larger guns operated by our artillerymen In addition to hauling rations supplies ammunition, etc our trucks after pulling through muddy and very difficult roads and delivering the shells right at the guns went on up to the front lines and hauled wounded back of the lines to first aid stations and in this way served as ambulances Our trucks were also in many cases utilized to transport prisoners.

'During our first week in the Argonne air raids and shelling compelled us to move two kilometers to Montblainville where our homes were in dugouts which afforded us protection from the shelling and bombing until just a few days before the armistice was siged, our division having been relieved

CHAPTER XV.

Bayard tried Lelia's recipe for a time, but there were expenses that he could not charge, and even the wad of money she had smuggled out of Newport did not last long. Other people were no more willing to pay bills than he. Moneys that were owed to him he could not collect. He could not respond to the multitudinous appeals for charity. This was a real shame in times of such frantic needs. He could not do any of the honorable, pleasant things that one can do with money. He had to do many of the dishonorable, loathsome things one without money must do.

In his desperation Bayard's thoughts reverted to his original rescuer, his father. He never appealed to the old man in vain. Bayard had often promised himself the delight of sending home a big check as a subtraction from his venerable debt. But it was a promise easy to defer, in the face of all the other temptations and opportunities. His father never pressed him, never expected a return of the money he had been investing in the boy. For a child is a piece of furniture bought on the instalment plan to go into somebody's else house as soon as it is paid for.

Bayard put off the appeal to his father as long as he dared, but at last put down to the hateful letter.

He hated to trouble his poor old dad at such a time (he wrote with truth), but his very life depended on raising some immediate money. He was young and husky and he would be on his feet in a jiffy. He would pay back every cent in a short while, even if he had to borrow it of some one else. Anyway, in a few weeks the panicky conditions would be over and business would return to the normal. He knew, he wrote, that "Old Reliable Kip" could perform his usual miracle and get blood from some of those Cleveland turnips.

He was so sure of his father that he ended his letter with an advance payment of thanks. This was the first payment he had made in advance for a long time.

He sealed the letter, put a special delivery stamp on it, and took it to the branch post office so that it would reach Cleveland without fail the next morning.

When he got back to the house there was a telegram from home.

"Leaving beaver due tomorrow a. m. don't meet me but be home must see you important mamma well love.

"FATHER."

The next morning Bayard rose betimes to meet his father at the train. And Daphne went to the Grand Central station with him. She ran to her father and flung her arms about him, and Bayard hugged him and carried his suitcase for him. It was no time to be tipping a porter. Nor to be making use of taxicabs with the jitney subway at hand. Bayard lugged his father's suitcase along Fifty-ninth street. The hall boy, who had not been tipped for some days, observed a strict neutrality. He was feeling the pinch, too.

When breakfast was ended Wesley noted that Lelia herself carried the dishes away, with Daphne's help. When the table was clear she closed the door on the two men and said:

"We'll leave you two alone to talk business."

The two men regarded each other askance, as uneasily as two wrestlers circling for a hold. Wesley was the first to speak. He said:

She Ran to Her Father and Flung Her Arms About Him.

"Well, my boy?"

"I wrote you a long letter last night, dad," Bayard said.

"You did? What about?"

Bayard had guessed the situation; he saw the cruel joke of it. He thought he could dull the edge with mockery. He snickered, rather cravenly:

"I wrote to ask you to lend me some money. I guess I wasted the postage."

"And I guess I wasted the fare over here. I thought I oughn't have taken a berth in the sleeper, but your mother insisted—said I'd not been feelin' any too well."

Bayard laughed outright—a laugh wet with vinegar tears.

Wesley sank into a chair with the little whimper of a sick old man.

Bayard went to his father and put his arm about him and regretted his Wall street disaster with a ferocious remorse. He could not speak, and there was a long dumbness before Wesley sighed:

"I guess we got to lose the home, then."

That "then" was a history in a word.

Bayard bent his head in shame at his helplessness. As usual, it was Wesley who found a shabby comfort in the situation—found it for his son.

"Don't you think anything more about it, my boy. I'm kind of relieved." He giggled with a pitiful senility. "I been so ashamed at trailpsin' over here to bother you instead of rushin' over to help you like I ought to—being your father—that I'm kind of glad you can't help me. I got no right to add to your troubles. I'm supposed to take care of you."

Bayard kept groaning:

"To lose your home! To think of you losing your home! And me standing by!"

"Why, it's nothing, Bayard. After all, we're not in Belgium. We've got friends. And relations. There's no danger of anything happening to us." Daphne and Lelia overheard this conversation while listening in the hall.

Daphne clung to Lelia and buried her face in Lelia's bosom to smother her frenzied grief. Lelia, mopping Daphne's cheek with her own handkerchief, caught the glint of a diamond on her finger. It glistened like a great, immortal tear.

It inspired her with a new hope. She had often consoled herself with the thought of her jewels as a final refuge, but she had put off the evil day. Now she felt that the time had come. She threw open the door and spoke into the gloom with a voice of seraphic beauty:

"I couldn't help hearing what you were saying. You needn't be downhearted, though, for I've just thought of a way to help daddy out." He was "daddy" to her also.

Bayard and Wesley turned and stared at her in amazement. She went on in a kind of ecstasy.

"My rings!" she cried. "Don't you see! My diamonds and rubies! And I've got a necklace or two, and some chains and brooches. They're worth a lot of money. And you're welcome to 'em, daddy."

The men were confused with too many emotions to know what to feel, much less what to say. Lelia's mission was so divinely meant that it was sacrilege to receive it with reluctance. And yet for Wesley to let this new daughter-in-law pawn her trinkets for him was post-graduate humiliation.

The end of it was that Bayard demanded the melancholy privilege of visiting the pawnshop himself. Lelia made a heap of her adornments. Last of all she took from her neck the little plaque he had given her with its star-dust of diamonds frosting a platinum filigree.

He kissed her mournfully and hurried away to the pawnshop. He skulked in and out like a burglar, and he brought away a pack of tickets and a lump of money. The pawnbroker apologized for lending him less than half the value of the gems; so many people were [illegible] pawnbrokers for salvation, he said, that he could not find cash enough for all. Times were hard indeed when the pawnbrokers were overworked.

Bayard went home and surrendered to Lelia her funds. She passed them over to her father-in-law. Poor Wesley peeled off the minimum that would serve as a sop to his creditors and said he would take the afternoon train home.

CHAPTER XVI.

Daphne had watched Lelia's little scene with as much confusion as the other two Kips. She felt a normal amount of jealousy, of course, as woman to woman, but no more than a healthy amount, for she liked Lelia and she was grateful to Lelia for being able to rescue her father and for being willing to. It was a fine thing for Lelia to strip herself of her last splendor to help an old father-in-law pay the interest on a mortgage on a house in another town. Daphne gave Lelia full mead of applause for that.

What embittered Daphne was that it had to be Lelia and not herself that saved her father, and that Lelia had to do the deed by spending things she had not paid for herself—ornaments, gewgaws, gifts.

Lelia had collected from life perhaps three thousand dollars' worth of jewels and Daphne had collected a fifty-dollar check, framed—and that check was in lieu of work. As soon as she remembered that check she ran up to her room and took it down from the wall, ripped off the back of the frame and removed the check from the mat.

She studied it and thought, "The first: money and the last." Then a vigor and determination clenched all her muscles in a kind of lockjaw. She came out of the spasm in a tremor of hysterical faith. She spoke her thought aloud in a fury: "It sha'n't be the last, it sha'n't, it sha'n't, by golly!" The feebleness of the expletive disgusted her. She tried to be powerful by way of powerful language. Before she knew it she ripped out a resounding oath that would have pleased good Queen Bess. "By G—, I'll pay my way! —honestly! like a man!"

All her powder exploded in that one detonation.

She fell over into a chair in horror. The blasphemy seemed to rattle about the little room. It terrified her. Mrs. Chivvis ran down the hall, carrying her everlasting sewing, and tapped on the door and asked:

"Did you call me, my dear? Are you ill?"

"No, thank you. I'm all right. I didn't say anything."

That was doubly false. She had said something. In the slang of the hour she had "said something." She had "said an earful," also a heartful.

Mrs. Chivvis supposed that what she had heard was some voice from the street, and went back along the hall, stitching as she walked.

Daphne took the check and went down to Bayard's apartment. Bayard was on his way to the pawnbroker's. Lelia was in his room. Old Wesley sat in a chair facing a wall. He seemed to see through it. Daphne went to him and put the check in his hand, explaining what it was.

"It's all I ever earned, daddy, and I want you to have it."

He looked at it and smiled and tears fairly shot out of his eyes. He patted her hand between his and said:

"Why, honey, I couldn't take your poor little earnings! Not for anything in this world."

"Please, daddy; it would make me ever so happy!"

"But it would kill me! You don't want to do that, do you? You must spend it on yourself. Buy yourself something nice with it."

"I'll buy myself a picture of you."

She told of her longing for a photograph of him, but did not tell him of her need of it as a talisman. He laughed aloud at this incredible way of spending money, till she began suddenly to cry. He had no answer to that argument except yes. Then she began to laugh. They decided to stop at a photographer's on the way to the five-thirty train.

"I'd Give a Thousand Dollars for One Photograph of My Father."

Daphne ran out and cashed Reben's check at the grocer's much to the relief of Reben's bookkeeper, whose books had been held up by the missing check.

Daphne asked for the privilege of taking her father to the train, and Bayard was so busy figuring where to put the cash he had on hand that he consented to stop at home.

They went first to the gallery of a photographer whose show-case had displayed some strong and veracious portraits of men. The photographer's prices staggered Daphne and she protested, but he answered dolefully:

"I'd give a thousand dollars for one photograph of my father."

That settled it.

After the sitting Daphne and her father proceeded to the station. She stopped at the gate because she had neither a ticket for the train nor a platform pass from the station master.

She watched him dwindling down the long platform. He was a mere manikin when he reached his place and waved to her before he vanished through the magic door of the train.

She waved to him with her handkerchief, and when he was gone she buried her eyes in it. Her partings with her father had marked epochs in her life. She wondered what destiny would do to her between now and the next one. She felt forlorn, afraid for his life on the train, afraid for her soul in the perils before it, and so sorry for him and for herself that she could not help boo-hooing a little.

Destiny did not keep her waiting, for while she was strangling her sobs as best she could she heard a voice over her shoulder. It said:

"Aha, gel, at last I have you in me power."

"Mr. Duane!" she gasped, as she turned to meet his smile with another. "And where have you been all this long white?"

"A lot you've cared," he growled. "Did you ever telephone me as you promised you would? No! Were you always out when I telephoned? Yes! Did you let me call on you? You did not! When at last it penetrated my thick hide that you were actually giving me a hint that you didn't want me round and that you had thrown me overboard, neck and crop, I grew very proud. I refused to call on you again."

"I'm awfully sor-ry," she said, and her voice broke.

"Sorry" was a dangerous word for her at that moment, and her sobs were beginning again, when he made a vigorous effort to talk them down.

The crowds in the station were too well preoccupied with their own errands to notice a girl crying, and to the gateman farewell tears were no luxury.

Duane tried the best he could to help her. He was saying: "And now I suppose I've got to miss my train and my golf and all that while I take you home in a taxi. You're far too pretty to be running around loose in a mob like this."

She shook her head. "You mustn't miss your train, Mr. Duane, or your golf. I'm used to going about alone, and I've got to get useder to it. I'm going home in the subway. Good-by and thank you."

She put out her hand formally, and he took it. It was like a soft, sunwarmed flower in his palm, and he clung to it. His warmth seemed to reach through his blood to his heart and to make it ache.

"I must go. You can't put me off again!" he said. "I will take you home!" He turned to call a redcap standing in solemn patience beside two traveling bags and a bristling golf bag. "Porter, take my things to the parcel room and bring me the check."

"No," said Daphne, hastily. "I mustn't! You mustn't! Really! I mean it! Good-by!"

She walked away so rapidly that he could not follow her without unseemly haste. She heard him call, sharply: "Porter, never mind the parcel room. Come along to the train."

Her success in escaping him was so complete that she rather regretted it. When she reached the apartment she found Lelia almost prostrated from the effects of her altruism and from the fact that Bayard was in one of his tantrums.

A special delivery letter had just come from Dutilh's shop. It said that Mr. Dutilh was arriving from Paris with his winter models, and since he would have to pay a large sum at the customs house it was regrettably necessary to beg Mr. Kip to send by return mail a check for the inclosed bill, which was long past due.

And now the briefly adjourned laws of finance were reassembled. Lelia's short reign was over; her extravagance had again found her out and demanded punishment. The gown she had bought, and was asked to pay for, had been worn shabby, danced to shreds in Newport. But the bill was as bright as ever.

Bayard was so fagged with his weeks of discouragement that he was as irascible as a veteran of the gout whose toe has been stepped on, when Daphne walked in he was denouncing Lelia in excellent form. He used Daphne as a further club.

"My poor sister sent back the gown she bought! But you—you bought more!"

Daphne realized how much this would endear her to Lelia and she took immediate flight. She found the Chivvises in a state of tension. Mr. Chivvis was not usually home before half-past six. Daphne felt an omen in the way they looked at her when they acknowledged her entrance.

She went to her room in a state of foreboding misery. She had not paid her board for several weeks. She had not mentioned the fact to Mrs. Chivvis, nor Mrs. Chivvis to her, though the nonpayment of a board bill is one of the self-evident truths that landladies usually discuss with freedom.

A few minutes later Mrs. Chivvis tapped on the door, her thimble making a sharp click. She brought her sewing with [illegible] and said: "May I sit down a moment? Thank you." She kept her eyes on the seam while she talked.

"Well, Miss Kip, the war has reached us also at last. My husband lost his position today."

"Yes? Oh, how horrible!" Daphne gasped, with double sincerity.

"The office was closed unexpectedly by an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. His salary was not paid last week nor this, and—well——we don't want to inconvenience you, but—"

"I understand," said Daphne. "I'll give you what I can."

She took her poor little wealth from her handbag. She had paid ten of the fifty to the photographer as a deposit. She gave Mrs. Chivvis twenty-five dollars, and promised her more.

Mrs. Chivvis was very grateful and went down the hall, smiling a little over her seam.

Clay called that evening. He was exhausted with a day of tramping the town, looking for work. He was too weary to talk and he fell asleep twice during one of Mr. Chivvis' commentaries on the probable effects of the imminent capture of Paris by the irresistible Germans. The French government had already moved to Bordeaux and— But Clay had read it all in a dozen different newspapers, and he passed away.

Daphne was restless. Mr. Chivvis was on her nerves. Clay was not pretty, asleep, sitting with his jaw dropped and his hands hanging down, palms forward, like an ape's. She was enjoying another of the woes of marriage without its privileges.

BALDWIN'S WORKER TOOK TEN BOTTLES

Miss Elizabeth Augustine, 3522 Dick's avenue, West Philadelphia, whose father is a blacksmith with Baldwin's Locomotive Works, says everybody in their house likes Tanlac. "Father suffered from a run-down system. He began to feel so weak he could hardly get around. He had a backache cough, inflamed throat and a general indigestion. His indigestion became impaired and for eight weeks he was in bad shape. One of his friends told him about Tanlac. He has taken ten bottles, but he's a different person. He can eat anything and sleeps like a top."

The genuine Tanlac, which bears the name J. I. Gore Co., on outside carton, is now sold here by Beighley's Pharmacy, Connellsville Drug Co., Fred H. Harmening, C. Ray Hetzel. Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.—Adv.

A SAFE, EASY WAY TO CURE ULCERS

Remarkable Results from Skin Remedy That Costs Almost Nothing.

No matter how bad a sore or ulcer afflicts you, it is believed that Hokara, the pure skin healer, will cure it, but if it doesn't cure, the purchase price will be refunded.

A. A. Clarke, the local agent for Hokara, who has sold hundreds of packages, says he has yet to find any form of wound or disease affecting the skin that Hokara does not heal, and its relief comes so quickly that those who try it are simply delighted with it.

Pimples, eczema, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, and all skin troubles are quickly relieved by applying this simple skin healer and tissue builder. It contains no grease or acids, and is cleanly to use.

WEAKNESS REMAINS LONG AFTER Influenza

Reports Show That Strength, Energy and Ambition Return Very Slowly to Grippe Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building-up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body, but will also help to build up and strengthen the run-down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-feren—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-feren—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also; probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gentian, that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health, as you can see by reading this formula, not forgetting kolo, that great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-feren is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak, run-down person to regain normal strength, energy, ambition and endurance.

Bio-feren is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—seven a day, until health, strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and if for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren, it is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Peptonate, Manganese Peptonate; Ext. Nux. Vomica; Powdered Gentian; Phenolphthalein; Oleoresin Capsicum. Kolo.

A. A. Clarke Says

After each meal—YOU eat one EATONIC (FOR YOUR STOMACH'S SAKE) and get full food value and real stomach comfort. Instantly relieves heartburn, bloated, gassy feeling, STOPS acidity, food repeating and stomach misery. AIDS digestion; keeps the stomach sweet and pure.

EATONIC is the best remedy and only costs a cent or two a day to use it. You will be delighted with results. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Please call and try it.

Costume Waists of Matching Material Liked In Paris—The Tremendous Vogue of Tunics—Dainty Sheer Blouses Ready for Spring—Many Lace Trimmed Models Among New Lingerie Styles

LEAVING out the plain and quite attractively severe "service blouses"—as they are called, whether one wears them for war-relief work or for golf—all the new shirtwaist styles are what might be termed "dressy"—did not one dislike that term so much.

But "dressy" blouses they are, just the same; rather formal blouses in their way which seem better suited for taking tea in smart restaurants than for shopping excursions or traveling. But in Paris the costume-blouse is the thing, and though white tub waists will inevitably come into favor with warmer weather, just now it is entirely the costume blouse matching the skirt in color and giving one—coatless—the effect of having a complete costume.

Many Dark Blouses This Year

A great many of these costume blouses, since they match the skirts they accompany, are of dark-colored material; and since brown is particularly smart this winter the brown blouses seem to predominate. It has been years and years since brown shirtwaists were so fashionable—and so numerous, if you come to think about it! A costume blouse of dark-colored chiffon means meticulous care in the selection of a camisole. Women have found that these sheer, dark waists have not looked well with matching skirts because the white or flesh tinted camisole under the blouse gave it a distinctly lighter tone than the skirt; and, of course, this spoiled the one-piece frock effect aimed at. So camisoles of dark material have been provided for wear with these dark blouses of sheer stuff; and one may now buy a dark blue, or a brown or a taupe camisole of satin or crepe de chine. The camisole has become such an important feature, indeed, that it is almost more important than the blouse itself. A good many women, having received perfectly adorable camisoles at Christmas (these pretty bits of underwear were highly favored as holiday gifts this year) are now looking busily for dainty blouses to wear over them—almost any sort of sheer, well-cut waist of chiffon or Georgette which will partly veil that distracting camisole which will be the real feature of the combination. And if one fancies the lovely, airy blouses, one simply must give serious consideration to the camisole question. A soft, graceful blouse of present style cannot—or should not—be donned over a rigidly fitting corset-cover or brassiere. One may wear the brassiere if she chooses but between it and the blouse must positively be the soft, slimpsy little camisole supported by ribbon or lace shoulder straps; and the more the camisole is trimmed with filet lace and tiny, hand-embroidered posies in natural colors the smarter. The camisole becomes perhaps rather obvious but that is the fashion.

Tunics And More Tunics.

If you keep up with Paris you have simply got to have one or two tunic-blouses this spring; soft, graceful affairs of thin silk or silk voile, or Georgette crepe, quite collarless, with very long tight sleeves and a loose, soft sash to hold in the straight lines of the fabric between waistline and hip. The tunic, preferably, will match the skirt with which it is worn; but it may be—if for at home wear only; of bright colored material like brocade or figured voile and with a sash of even brighter hued chiffon. Parisiennes are daft about these tunics; but American shopkeepers say that women here prefer the waistline blouse, which may be worn with a tailored suit without showing itself below the hip length jacket. There are plenty of these blouses among the new models—they far outnumber the exclusively smart tunics; but it is repeated, every woman who aims to be in the van of the fashion must provide herself with at least a tunic or two for occasional wear. A stunning tunic is of black chiffon, falling in straight but not scant lines from shoulder to knee. There is a deep band of black satin embroidered with small white beads at the lower edge, and a similar, narrower band edges the flowing bell sleeve. The neckline is cut straight across from shoulder to shoulder and has a row of white buttons, and loops at the shoulder are attached to the three end buttons on each side. One gets into the tunic at the top—there is no other opening—and fastens the buttons and loops when it is on. A broad, soft sash of the chiffon ties around the waist. Any woman will realize the dress-value of such a tunic which will instantly turn a black satin skirt into a whole costume; yet the skirt can be used separately with other blouses when desired. Some of these tunics are of olive green chiffon embroidered with citron beads; a very attractive model of dark blue chiffon has trimming bands of dark blue satin embroidered with tiny steel beads. And a white chiffon tunic with white beads will make a charming afternoon frock, used with the white silk sport skirt which in the morning does duty with simpler shirtwaists. Thus a week-end wardrobe may be eked out miraculously.

Fastenings Cleverly Disguised

Only the sport blouses have buttons that show—buttons, that is, that are obviously fastenings. There are many clever devices for hiding the way one gets into or out of a blouse and sometimes the method is hidden only from a front view for the blouse buttons frankly down the back. It looks now as though button-in-back waists would be well established by midsummer and the day of the patient and-long-suffering husband who fumbles with maddeningly tiny buttons and buttonhole is again at hand. A new button-in-back blouse is pictured—a model of sheer, printed voile in a new all-over pattern, with trimming bands of plain colored silk herringboned to the material. This blouse has the simple, flat lines now fancied, and the long sleeve, trimly fitted at the wrist. It has also the round, collarless neckline, though a turned down collar relieves what might otherwise be too severe an effect. Another way of hiding the fastening is by the use of the loose front panel. Sometime these panel fronts fasten with invisible snaps along the shoulder line; sometimes the fastening is at the edge of the panel, from a round neck to waistline. This effect is illustrated in the blouse of red and white figured crepe with trimming of plain red chiffon. Pleated frills of the chiffon trim the sleeves and a frill falls over the tucked red chiffon panel, a small collar of the red chiffon rising at the back of the neck. Red crochet buttons edge the panel and dangle from the outer side of the sleeve—and by the way, buttons are a favorite trimming on these new costume blouses.

Another dainty blouse fastens down the front but the fastening is hidden under a cascade of frills. This is a new way of using frills; and the frilled sleeve is especially new and interesting. The blouse is made of Georgette crepe in a lovely shade of faint blue-lilac and the frills—some of lace and others of crepe and lace—are machine pleated. The sleeve gives an effect of graceful fullness but nevertheless it retains the trim, fitted line at the wrist which is insisted upon now. These pale colored Georgette waists are much fancied, and if the colors do fade after wear and cleansing, there is great comfort to be had in the easily-used soap dye which restore sheer fabrics to dainty tints in a twinkling. There are many of these soap dyes and they cost so little that one may experiment with various colors until just the right shade has been obtained. If you try the process, however, remember that the heat of the pressing iron will leave the fabric several shades lighter than it is when it is wrung out of its color-bath.

Captivating Tub Blouses

One thing is certain about "wash waists" as the unimaginative shopkeeper insists on calling them, though every woman nowadays uses the term "tub blouses"; and that certain thing is that lace and embroidery trimming will decorate many of the models this year. Filet lace seems to be the favorite sort though there are some dainty models of sheer batiste trimmed with pleated frills of fine Val. Pictured is a new tub blouse of white batiste with lace forming a little vest and edging a deep though narrow collar. Pin-tucks add their bit as a trimming feature. This blouse has the fronts gathered at a shoulder seam that droops well forward—a present-moment feature. The cross-bar dimity blouse with its checked gingham collar and cuffs is very crisp and smart and the high eton collar and little cravat-bow are smartest of all.

How Comes the Jolly 1919 MIDDY

IF IT isn't a middy; it is a tunic. If it isn't a tunic; it is a middy. That is the final word of Paris about new sport blouses, for every single model this year comes below the waistline. The tunic blouses are called smocks; but sometimes the line of demarkation between a smock and a middy is hard to determine. At any rate the new "athletic" blouse is a straight, loose affair that hangs from the shoulders and if there is a belt, it is much more likely to be located at the hip than at the waistline. Many of the tennis and boating smocks worn by young women at Palm Beach and on the French Riviera this season have had shaped belts at the hip, the belt confining the loose garment into trim lines where it merges into the line of the skirt. Some of the American middy blouses of tub material have also this hip-belt, or edge-band, fastened with buttons and buttonholes at either side.

Three regulation middies for next summer's outdoor wear are pictured. One is made of white galatea with blue linen and white braid trimming and an embroidered sleeve chevron; another is of dark blue flannel of soft and fine quality; and the third is made of navy blue wool jersey with touches of white braid. All these middies have the loose, straight line that is so comfortable and so picturesque when the garment is worn over a girlish figure; and every one of the three is guiltless of a belt, either at waistline or hip. The flannel middy is particularly good style and will be a splendid choice for the girl who spends next summer in the mountains, or on a boat. The white galatea middy may be added to the wardrobe for warm days, but the flannel one will prove very comfy on cool mornings and evenings, on the water; or on cool, gray days in the mountains. This flannel middy has the shaped yoke that gives a trim effect at the shoulders. The lower section is not fuller than the yoke but the bisecting line of the yoke across the bust gives more style to the garment and makes it more becoming to the figure. Always select a roomy size in a middy so that the armhole will droop a little over the shoulder and arm. This gives the extra roominess across front and back, necessary in a garment intended to fall in loose, flat lines. The flannel middy has sleeves with wristbands that unbutton so that they may be rolled back when occasion requires and the Eagle and small insignia denoting gunner's mate on the sleeve give the middy quite a seaman-like suggestion.

The soft silk tie is arranged in the new way—that is, without a bow or knot, the silk being looped around the neck opening and tied under the collar at the back. Middy-wearing girls have adopted the notion of sailor lads and pin the corners of the collar together at the back, making a sort of hood of the collar. Why the sailor boys have done this all winter is not known to the Scribe, but the sailor uniforms have collars fastened up in this fashion.

The jersey cloth middy is specially good looking because of its fine, beautiful fabric which takes graceful lines on the figure and lends the garment a suggestion of exclusiveness. This middy has also the bisecting yoke and there is a cunning, tiny pocket above the yoke at the left side. The black satin tie is knotted in the conventional sailor-way and is drawn under a braid-trimmed collar. Never tie a middy necktie in an ordinary bow with ends or in a four-in-hand knot. The bow must be plump and soft, with two outstanding loops that suggest a knot rather than a bow. It is usually the easiest plan to make the knot carefully and tack it in place with a few invisible stitches. Then the tie can be slipped over the head and the collar drawn over it at the back, whenever the middy is donned.

A Good Looking And Practical Middy Of Blue Jersey Cloth For Athletic And Camping Wear Next Summer.

The white galatea middy is an adorably comfy garment for summer bungalow wear, or for camping, or for boating or any other informal outdoor sport of summer-time. Unless one leads a distinctly nautical life the middy is not worn mornings, in a smart summer hotel colony; but where boats are anchored off a yacht club women of all ages come and go, at the club house and even at the adjacent hotels in the unconventional boating garb. There will be a deal of small-boating next summer, without doubt, for so many restrictions were imposed on motor boat cruising and yachting generally last year that many people did not get out their crafts at all, and this year ardent boatmen and boatwomen can scarcely wait to take up the fascinating water existence again. If there is any more delightful way to spend a summer than living on one's own cabin cruiser or sailing sloop in a yacht club harbor and faring forth on week-end cruises over Sundays, the Scribe cannot think what it could be. After one has acquired the boat—and it should not cost more than the automobile which every American family is so daft to possess—the life is a very economical one. Elaborate meals are out of the question in the little galley-kitchen and one eats simple food with a relish. And as for clothes; several middies, one or two duck skirts and a costume or two for shore wear are all one needs.

A middy and high-heeled shoes should never be worn together. The combination is in very bad taste. The middy is such an informal sport garment that one must not try to "dress it up" with accessories that would be out of taste—and out of the picture. Heel-less yachting shoes, or tennis shoes look best with the middy and its accompanying short skirt; though low-heeled leather sport shoes may be worn with the flannel or jersey camping-out middies if they are accompanied by dark skirts. High-heeled slippers or boots give the middy costume a theatrical air and take away the sport suggestion which becomes such a garb. With one's shore costume of dainty frock, hat and parasol, dainty high-heeled buttoned boots may be donned, but not with one's boating middy! By the way, did I tell you last week that buttoned shoes are coming back in time for summer wear? The new models are even prettier than those women were before the war-ban was put on and they will soon be out in all the new styles, not only for formal wear but in medium-heel models for wear with tailored stree and traveling dress.

SOFTENING THAT TRYING NECKLINE

THERE IS more and more call at the neckwear counters for "something to give that collarless neckline without the bare, plain effect that is so unbecoming." Most women find one perfectly collarless frock quite enough to satisfy their longing for ultra modishness, and a warning conveyed by their mirror sends them post-haste to the neckwear section to find something more becoming. There are various dainty neck fixings which seem to fill the bill exactly; collars that outline back and sides of a square neck opening, cowl collars that stand up from the low, collarless neck, and flat, round collars edged with little pilsse frills that fasten youthfully at the back. A pretty set of this sort is of fine white net with pleated frills of Val. lace and the low, round-collar is matched by cuffs of the net and lace that turn back from the wrist.

WHY WEAR UGLY HOUSE-APRONS?

VERY FEW women realize the possibilities of coquetry in an apron. Many women loathe aprons and only wear them when stern necessity demands; that is, when some protection is absolutely necessary for the gown in washing dishes or other household tasks. But an apron is really a pretty and a charming thing when its artistic possibilities are considered and it may be made a very becoming affair indeed. Usually it is the little bride who affects aprons that have charm; her morning aprons are tricksy affairs of pink striped gingham with a smart flare in the skirt part and a coquettish little bib above the waistline—and very crisp strings that tie in a big bow behind. An elderly housekeeper would feel a bit foolish in such an apron—even though when she goes to a matinee she wears a dainty blouse quite as youthful and ornate as any the little bride would select. The house-apron of the average good housekeeper is made of checked gingham with a narrow belt-band that pins at the back. This unbeautiful but extremely practical affair is donned when household labors demand protection of the gown—but you never catch the housekeeper at the front door in it, as sometimes you catch the little bride in her bewitchingly becoming pink print apron. There seems to be no good reason why every house-apron should not have its qualities of grace and becomingness. Why wear checked brown gingham if pale blue chambray matches one's eyes; or blue checked gingham if something in pink print will set off one's complexion? And why a straight, shapeless apron when a really smart one with circular, shaped skirt and a bib with extensions that button at the back of the neck can be obtained at modest price or manufactured in an hour or two in the home sewing room? The woman who cooks for her family likes—or should like—to look her best for her family, even when she bends over a hot stove; and a pretty and becoming apron will make her far more attractive than the shapeless checked affair which suggests the household drudge.

MIDSEASON WASHING OF CURTAINS

THERE IS nohing the average housekeeper dislikes more than to take down curtains and put them up again half way through a season; but fresh curtains do make such a vast difference in the dainty neatness and good cheer of a home that the trouble is usually well worth while. Nothing is more depressing than the grimy, dust-filled hangings that flutter before open windows when the mild days of April arrive, in many a home that is otherwise spic-span and luxurious.

If lace or net curtains have been properly put up on separate rods with attachments in good working order, it should not be a matter of great difficulty to lift off the rods, remove the curtains and give them a mid-winter bath. An expensive trip to the laundry is not necessary and as curtains are no longer stiffly starched any woman can do the freshening at home in a few hours. It will probably be impossible to dry the curtains out of doors because of stormy or freezing weather, so a stretching frame is not an indispensable part of the process anyway. Select a doorway not in constant use and drive very tiny brads all around the top and sides of the doorway, putting them between mouldings so that no holes will show when they have been removed. The curtains may be stretched across the doorway on the little brads, and four or five curtains will dry at one time. Soak the curtains several hours in cold water; then dip them up and down in hot water in which shaved soap has been stirred to a thick suds. Rinse in two waters and stretch on the curtain frame or across your prepared doorway overnight. Next day put the curtains on their rods again and see if the fresh daintiness of your rooms does not well repay you for the effort.

M'CORMICK TELLS OF MOVEMENTS OF MEDICAL CORPS

Member of 110th Begins With Landing of Command at Liverpool in May.

TRAINED IN FLANDERS

Route of Travel Through Various Towns and up to the Front at the Marne Described; Follow Germans to Fismes Where Boys are Relieved.

Writing to his mother under date of December 1 George B McCormick, a member of the 110th Medical Detachment, tells of his experiences from the time of landing over there until he was gassed in September The letter follows

"Dear Mother

'Just a few lines to let you know I am still well and happy Now since the censorship has been lifted I am able to tell you of a little where and what I have been doing since coming over If you will buy a large map of France you can follow me

'We landed at Liverpool, England, on May 17, crossed England to Dover and left the next day, crossing the English channel to Calais, France We stayed there about a week and left for Lottingnem which is up in Flanders where we stayed about six weeks, training and held in reserve for the British We left then for a three-day hike to Hedsire where we took a train and rode for about 24 hours, landing at Meaux

"We rode in trucks about 15 kilos to St. Mesmes, where we stayed about 10 days. While there we did duty in an evacuation hospital at Juilly as they were being rushed with wounded marines who were injured fighting in Belleau woods-in the middle of June

"We then marched to Elper and then to Artonges. We stayed there for a week when the regiment was together for the first time since being in France. At 2 A. M, July Fourth morning we were awakened by the bugle call that thrills the soldiers as no other call does and it was the call to arms. We were rushed up to Caude Bria with the expectation of Jerry starting a drive as he usually started something on holidays.

"We stayed there for a day and went back to Artauges We stayed there until July 9 when we returned to Caude Bria and went into the reserve line. Exactly at midnight of the 14th the Germans started their drive They crossed the Marne and advanced within a kilo of where we lay Then our men made a counter attack which developed into the second battle of the Marne Jerry never stopped retreating until the morning of November 11

"On July 26 we crossed the Marne and went into the front lines at Fresnes Regimental headquarters was hit and we lost our lieutenant colonel. We had our dressing station in an old chateau, where we stayed for three days. While there I wrote a letter on your birthday and sent it to you.

"July 30 we moved to Courmount where we had our dressing station in an open field about 100 yards back of the front lines Regimental headquarters was again hit twice within three days. Here we stayed till the evening of August 1 and then went back about six kilos for a couple of days rest. The first evening we stayed in a woods and was bombed losing quite a number of men.

"We left the woods the following evening with some companies having only about 75 men We then hiked to Cohn, which was about the hardest and muddiest march I ever was on We lay in a woods near Cohn till about the middle of August when we then went to Courville a few kilos from the Vesle river,

"The first battalion went into the line on the Vesle while we lay in reserve at Bon Maisson farm for five days Then we exchanged places with the first battalion on the lines and part of us, including myself went to Villete We had our dressing station in the center of the village while the front lines of Jerry were at the edge about 50 yards away

"After nine days the second battalion relieved us and we went in reserve at Courville After being there five days the regiment moved back to a woods about 15 kilos for a rest We were there one night when we were rushed back up to the lines and crossed the Vesle river to Bashen which is to be left of Fismes about two kilos We stayed here until the evening of September 7 when the division was supposed to be relieved but instead was transferred to the Argonne woods where the bloodiest battle of the whole four years was fought

"On the evening of September 6 was when I was gassed in our dressing station at Basilen Basben was between the Vesle and Aisne rivers From Basleu I was taken in an ambulance to Chateau Thierry and put on a hospital train, arriving in the outskirts of Paris at a place called Autiel I left the hospital on October 8 and went to Toul to a replacement camp After traveling all over the country for two weeks I found my outfit at Zancy

"I was only there two days when we moved to Beaumont. We stayed there about a week and took trucks and rode about 30 kilos to Vaguilles where we started to hike about 15 kilos to St. Lewis farm which was on the front line. We were there about two days doing only raiding and patrolling and were relieved by one of the other battalions

"We went to Hattouville and stayed there two days and then went back to the lines on the evening of the 10th and then that day that will always be remembered

"That evening we moved back to Hattouville and from there to Crue. Well Mother will close for this time, hoping everyone is well Regards to everyone.'

BRITISH EMPIRE KNEW IN 6 MINUTES

Record Time Made in Informing Colonies That England Was at War.

It required only six minutes to inform the British empire that England was at war on the night of August 4, 1914, says Lord Harcourt, who was then colonial secretary.

"On that unforgettable night," he said to the Empire Parliamentary association, "I was in the cabinet room, Downing street, with a few colleagues. Our eyes were on the clock, our thoughts on one subject only; but there was a feeble effort to direct our conversation to other matters

"We were waiting for a reply, which we knew full well would never come, to our ultimatum to Berlin.

"When Big Ben struck 11 30—midnight in Berlin—we left the room knowing that the British empire was at war.

"I crossed to the Colonial office to send a war telegram to the whole of the British empire. I asked the official in charge of that duty how long it would take. He said 'about six minutes.'

"I asked him to return to my room when he had done his work. In seven minutes he was back and before morning I received an acknowledgment of my telegram from every single colonial protectorate, and even islet in the Pacific

"So the grim machinery of war began revolving in perfect order and with perfect preparation because more than two years previously, an individual war book had been prepared by the colonial committee of defense for every single protectorate and island. It was at that moment locked in the safe of each governor or commissioner and they knew at once what to do."

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that "lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

LAW CLERK IS RICH

Inherits Fortune After Struggling to Years on Meager Salary.

W W. Scranton, for 30 years a resident of Knoxville, Tenn., who struggled for the last seven years to feed and clothe his wife and two sons on his meager salary as a clerk in a law office in Fountain City, Tenn., has just inherited an estate valued at $100,000

Scranton learned of his good fortune from attorneys for his great aunt, who died at Galion, O., recently Forthwith he abandoned his clerkship and prepared to enter the practice of law. From now on he is assured of an income of about $330 monthly from the estate, and this total, together with what he earns from his new profession, he believes, will keep the wolf from the door.

Scranton's sister, who resides at Galion, inherited property worth $1,500,000 from the great aunt's estate. The Scrantons were born in Copenhagen, Denmark.

PAYS FOR CLOTHING

It Was Evidence Against Him and Negro Burned It.

Miss Geneva Criswell of Vandalia, Mo., was paid $85 through the county circuit court for the loss of her graduating wardrobe, and thereby hangs an interesting court story.

Miss Criswell was a member of the graduating class of the Vandalia high school. A few days before commencement William Briscoe, a negro, stole her graduating clothes. He was captured but decided to destroy the evidence by burning the clothing He was sentenced to a term in the penitentiary, but was paroled upon his promise to pay Miss Criswell for the clothes

He has been saving the money at the rate of $5 a month and this week made the final payment.
